Introduction

al-Jawshan al-Kabīr, which means 'the strong cuirass or breastplate,' is a supplication ascribed in a narration from Zayn al-'Abidin, the son of Husayn, to his great-grandfather, the Prophet Muhammad (Peace and blessings be upon him). The supplication consists of many divine names and attributes, most of which are found in the Qur'an, and its recitation is reputed to be highly meritorious. In recent times, it has been made popular by Bediuzzaman Said Nursi, the author of the Risale-i Nur, a Qur'anic commentary of several volumes concerned particularly with questions of belief. Said Nursi recited the Jawshan regularly throughout his life, and as a source of reflective thought, said that in one respect, the Risale-i Nur had been born of it.

So that with its universal appeal, this matchless supplication may be made available to more people, we are publishing it here in its English translation together with the original Arabic.

Mercy! Mercy!
Thy praises I cannot count; Thou art only as Thou praisest Thyself!
*O God * O Most Merciful * O Compassionate * O Most Forgiving * O Accepter of thanks.*
I beseech Thee through the Beautiful Names Thou recountest about Thyself, and Thy elevated attributes and all Thy words, that Thou forgivest me, and my parents, and my master Said Nursi and the students of the Risale-i Nur, and all believing men and women, and Muslim men and women, the living from among them and the dead. I beseech that Thou bestowest upon us such mercy that will leave us in no need of the mercy of Thy creatures, other than Thee. And answer our needs and give us what we request in this world and the next. And appoint for us when we depart this world, happiness, witnessing, blessings, and good tidings. And grant Muhammad, May blessings and peace be upon him, ample reward from us as is his right and as he deserves. And do not leave us to our own
